SEARCH FOR MISSING FLIERS

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 12.—The search for some trace of the missing Japan to Seattle fliers, Don Moyle and Cecil A. Allen, was still on today. Captain C. H. Hinkle, commander of the North Division of the United States Coast Guard, today had been informed of reports that Captain H. Hanson, of the steamer "Alaska" late Tuesday night had heard what appeared to be the sound of an airplane motor. The "Alaska" at that time was 30 miles off shore near Lituya Bay, southeast Alaska.

PREPARES FOR JAPAN FLIGHT

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 12.—Mrs. Juanita Burns, 24-year-old flier, today was going ahead with her plans for flying from Seattle to Tokyo. She said she would use an all-metal monoplane with a speed of 180 miles an hour. The plane is powered with 525 horse-power motor, and has a gasoline capacity of 900 gallons.

FIVE KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

Natalé, Brazil, Sept. 12.—Four passengers and the pilot of a regular passenger hydroplane, bound from Natalé, were killed today when the plane crashed and exploded while taking off from Potengy River. The mechanic, the sole survivor of the five persons, was seriously injured.

MINERS IN PITCHED BATTLE

Morgantown, W. Va., Sept. 12.—Bitterness between unemployed miners and mine guards culminated today in a pitched battle near the plant of the Connelsville By-Products Company, a non-union operation, which resulted in the attacking snipers being driven off by machine gun bullets sprayed upon the surrounding hillside by mine guards. One man was injured. The "engagement" lasted for half an hour.

REDEPOSIT FUNDS IN BANKS

Scranton, Sept. 12.—Scores of residents today returned to many of the state banks to redeposit funds which were withdrawn, upon the heels of the closing of the Anthracite Trust Company by the State Banking Department. Restored confidence was the outgrowth of a series of radio talks given by E. J. Lynette, editor and publisher of the Scranton Times, and appeals made by leading citizens through the city newspapers.

Historic Fountain Inn Sold at Doylestown

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 12.—One of the most important real estate transactions in recent years took place here yesterday when the historic Fountain Inn, situated at the intersection of the Lackawanna Trail and State street, this borough for the past 180 years, was sold to George Slotter, who has been manager for the past year.

Mr. Slotter was formerly in charge of one of the largest fraternal clubs in Philadelphia. The inn was purchased from Wynne James, Jr. Under the ownership of Francis C. Mireau, widely known collector of antiques, the Fountain Inn became internationally known. It was a frequent stopping place of the world's richest man, Henry Ford.

The Inn will be conducted along the same lines as it has in past years. Some improvements will be made to the property. It has become the headquarters of thousands of motorists through the summer and fall season for week-end visits.

NEW POLICIES ADOPTED AT BENSALEM SCHOOL

Enrollment in High School Exceeds That of Past Years

BULLETINS ARRANGED

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Sept. 12.—Despite the fact that they were all glad when school stopped last June, the students of Bensalem high were eager to start the new school year.

Students and teachers are pleased at the freshness of the building.

Upon arrival at school on the opening day pupils went into the auditorium to become acquainted with the new teachers, and to receive instructions from their principal, Samuel K. Faust.

Bensalem high has adopted several different policies, which will be effective this year. The marking system has been revised and there are several courses from which the student may choose. They are: the academic course, the scientific, the general and the commercial curriculum. This gives the student a wide variety to choose from. The students will have their final roster completed in a few days.

The enrollment in the high school exceeds that of the past. There are 340 students enrolled. The freshmen class is the largest, with about 74 students; the sophomore class numbers about 50; the junior and senior classes have about 30 students each. The seventh and eighth grades have approximately 70 students to each class.

Each student has been supplied with a bulletin of information. This bulletin will make the student familiar with every phase connected with his or her school, in order that there might be no excuses forthcoming.

School will be in full session on Monday.

BARN IS BURNED

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 12.—Fire of undetermined origin Thurs. night destroyed the barn on the farm of Charles Klejnot at Danboro, causing a loss of $3,000. Cattle was saved but part of the farm machinery was destroyed.

P. R. R. AND ITS STATION

(By "The Stroller")

Again great tall grass almost conceals the P. R. R. station here from the eyes of the pedestrian, and strangers wander about in the vicinity asking to be directed to the spot where trains arrive and depart.

Isn't it almost time that the P. R. R. officials saw that the grass crop was harvested or are they in their obsession of economy, going to permit the green herbage to grow as long as possible and then sell it as hay?

A few evenings ago I overheard an individual in one of our local stores commenting upon a picture postcard depicting the station, and this is what he said:

"That picture must have been taken in winter time when there were no weeds and tall grass, because the station would never look like that during the grass-growing season."

Bristol, so far as the P. R. R. is concerned, has almost been omitted from its train schedule, but we do hope that passengers traveling through can at least get a glimpse of the town.

PASTOR WILL CONSIDER EDUCATION OBLIGATIONS

Union Service at Presbyterian Church Will Have Rev. Hess As Speaker

FALL ACTIVITIES

At the regular morning worship service of the Bristol Presbyterian Church the minister, Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton, will preach on the subject, "The Obligations of Education" taking as his text the words of Jesus in the sermon on the Mount, "Neither do men light a lamp, and put it under the bushel, but on the stand; and it shineth unto all that are in the house."

"With 5,000,000 boys and girls returning to high school and over a million to college, we may well stop to ponder what their obligations will be, and what ours are," says Rev. Knowlton.

The Men's Bible Class will resume its sessions this Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance to begin the year. The Church School will meet as usual at ten o'clock.

The union service will be held at this church Sunday evening at seven forty-five. Rev. George F. Hess, of the Methodist Church, will be the preacher. His topic will be: "Jesus and His Work."

St. James's Church

Services for the fifteenth Sunday after Trinity at St. James's Episcopal Church, will include:

8 a. m., Holy Communion; 9.30 a. m., opening session of Church School for fall and winter; 10.45, morning prayer and sermon; 7.45, Union service at the Presbyterian Church.

All parents having children who have reached the age of three years who are not yet enrolled in the Church School may enroll them this Sunday.

An important meeting of the women of the parish will be held on Monday evening at the parish house at 7.45 p. m. This meeting is to discuss the advisability of a bazaar in December as held in previous years. All women are urged to be present, particularly the chairladies of committees of last year.

A regular meeting of the vestry will be held at the parish house on Monday evening, Sept. 21st at eight.

If there are any new families who have moved in town during the summer, the rector, Rev. George E. Boswell, will be glad to welcome them, and will appreciate having their names and addresses.

Bristol M. E. Church
Services will be held in the newly-painted auditorium at the Bristol M. E. Church tomorrow.

Arrest Made After Quiet Investigation by Superintendent of Public Safety McGee — Admission Made After Grilling by McGee and Bucks County Fire Marshal Stackhouse — Starting of Conflagration Re-enacted

A 19-year-old boy has confessed to firing the barns and out-buildings on the Brennan farm, Mill Creek Road, near Tullytown, which were destroyed early yesterday morning, entailing a loss estimated at $25,000.

In addition to the Brennan fire the youth also confesses that he has on numerous occasions started fires in Bristol, Tullytown and nearby vicinity. He also admits sending a false fire call to the Bristol Consolidated Department.

The lad:

Ira Russell, 19, High Bridge, Tullytown, is at present on a two-year parole for having robbed the residence of Dr. J. Fred Wagner, here, about two years ago. One year of the parole has expired. He was also taken into custody yesterday afternoon on suspicion of having annoyed a 13-year-old girl.

There was a general suspicion yesterday morning that the Brennan fire was the work of an incendiary. Eugene Smith, tenant on the place, went out about 11 o'clock Thursday night to make his rounds of the place, when he discovered the hay barn in flames. The blaze spread so rapidly that it was almost certain that it was the work of an incendiary.

Superintendent of Public Safety, Bristol Borough, James L. McGee, began a quiet investigation of his own. He went into the Tullytown area and it was but a short time before he had Russell under suspicion.

RUSSELL SAYS HE IS STILL 32 CENTS AHEAD

In his confession of starting the Brennan fire Ira Russell told the police that a year ago he fired the trestle work at the Brennan sand pits near Tullytown.

Russell ran to the Brennan residence and informed them that their sand pit was afire. Michael Brennan gave the boy 50 cents and thanked him for the information.

Last night Russell said: "I'm still 32 cents ahead of 'Mike' Brennan."

It appears that he, Russell, on that occasion went to Elmer Johnson's store at Tullytown and purchased a gallon of kerosene for 18 cents which he used to start the fire.

Bucks County Fire Marshal William L. Stackhouse, Hulmeville, was called into the case and Russell was placed under detention until last night. Last evening Stackhouse and McGee put Russell through a severe questioning and he admitted his guilt at about 11.30 o'clock.

The authorities took Russell to the Morrisville barracks of the State Police near midnight and there he made a signed confession.

Russell not only confessed to the fire but took McGee and Stackhouse over the Brennan farm and showed them just how he reached the farm, what he did upon arrival and after he had started the blaze.

Russell attended a moving picture show in Bristol Thursday night, according to his confession. He then hailed a friend who gave him a ride home in an automobile, letting him out at the High Bridge, Tullytown. "On the way up from Bristol, I thought it would be fine to have a big fire tonight," Russell told the authorities.

He left his friend at the High Bridge but instead of walking across the P. R. R. tracks and going to his home nearby he walked to the Brennan place. He went to the hay barn which was one of the largest hay barns in this section of Bucks County. He had matches with him and entering the barn set fire to baled straw.

The youth then walked across the farms to his home and went to bed, where he remained for about 15 minutes. He was awakened by his brothers, he says, and he and two brothers ran to the Brennan fire. Arriving at the scene of the blaze which he had himself started, he worked with the Edgely fire company and remained at the scene until the last fire apparatus left. He also says that he assisted Mr. Brennan, owner of the place, to get two horses out of the fire into a stable, after the fire had been extinguished.

Russell also states that he fired the store-houses of the T. B. Harkins Foundry Company and Warner J. Steel in Bristol about two years ago. He also says that he turned in a false fire call from box 43 in Bristol. He told McGee and Stackhouse how many companies responded to the various fires he had started and gave a very accurate description of them.

Russell confessed that three years ago he fired a house and barn of the Warner Sand Company at Tullytown. Questioned as to his reason for starting the various fires he said that he wanted the excitement. In regard to the Brennan fire he gave as his excuse that he wanted to get work of rebuilding the barn for a friend.

BETTER MARKETING

There is something wrong with the system for distributing fruits and vegetables. That traditional chain of producer-middleman-merchant has several weak links in it. It is fair to none.

Evils of the old system ought to be corrected by the national fruit and vegetable exchange, which the Federal Farm Board is organizing and will finance and support. It promises to bring coordination into a system which seems to have been entirely devoid of it, and lacking which it has been an instrument of great waste and financial loss.

Under the old system it frequently occurred that fruits and vegetables rotted on the farm because the middlemen were creating an artificial shortage at the market in order to force up prices. Or produce would pour into the market only to bring prices below the cost of packing and shipping.

These defects the proposed exchange is expected to remedy in large degree. The directors will be selected by the various farm cooperatives, which will be sold stock in the exchange, and sales managers will be maintained at the principal terminal markets. Reliable brokers will represent it at other markets.

Efficiently and fairly managed, the exchange can assure the producer top prices at all times, guarantee the consumer prices based on supply and demand and curb waste by posting the producers on market requirements.

A MATTER OF TASTE

On certain strata of the human race there is a libido for the ugly, as in other strata there is a libido for the beautiful. It is impossible, for instance, to put down the wallpaper that defaces the average American home of the lower middle class to mere inadvertence or the obscene humor of the manufacturers. Such awful designs, it must be apparent, give a positive pleasure to a certain type of mind.

This taste for the unsightly extends to towns and houses. While one of our pet cynics exaggerated when he said the most unlovely towns are all in the United States, we have our share of them.

There is an appalling desolation and ugliness about the average steel and mining town. In the very heart of industrial America, the richest and grandest nation ever known, there are scenes so dreadfully hideous, so intolerably bleak and forbidding that they reduce the whole aspiration of man to a sort of joke. There is found wealth beyond computation, almost beyond imagination, there are found human habitations so abominable that they would have disgraced a race of filthy cats. It is more than mere filth—it is unbroken and agonizing ugliness, the sheer revolting monstrosity of the whole landscape.

Here is something the psychologists have neglected—the love of ugliness for its own sake, the lust to make the world unbeautiful.

Stage stars like long runs but not in their hosiery.

The pistol, however, isn't a cause. It is a symptom.

Be yourself. Paint just makes an old flivver look older.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

by ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT BY COVIEL, FRIEDE, INC., — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Geraldine Foster was hacked to death in a house on Pedler's Road, leased by her employer, Dr. Humphrey Maskell, and her nude body buried in a grave filled with tannic acid. Two women were seen leaving the doctor's office carrying bottles similar to those found near the grave. Mrs. Morgan, a neighbor, substantiates the doctor's statement that he was with her daughter, Doris, the day of the disappearance. Maskell claims there was a strange woman outside his office when he returned. Other suspects are Harry Armstrong, Geraldine's former fiancé, and her brother, Bruce, who will receive her inheritance. Bruce is an adopted son whose father was a murderer. Dr. Maskell reports to Police Commissioner Thatcher that Geraldine phoned him on January 5, ten days after her disappearance, requesting that he meet her, but failed to appear. The autopsy shows she was killed on December 24, and her body preserved by the acid to make it appear that death occurred within 48 hours. Maskell, accused, sticks to his story. His brother and sister-in-law, George and Natalie Maskell, call to see him, but are turned away. One of the women whom Maskell visited on Christmas Eve informs Colt that a woman phoned that day leaving the following message for the doctor: "Please come at once to Pedler's Road. Something terrible has happened." Doris Morgan reveals that Maskell left her and his chauffeur at a confectioner's while he delivered gifts. Maskell submits to an examination by a lie-detector instrument.

CHAPTER XXX.

"WHAT are you most ashamed of in your life?" repeated Thatcher Colt. Experiment will prove that this question will bring to pause the busy thoughts of any human being, even if he is not accused of crime. "Of nothing," declared Doctor Maskell, finally. But his voice was less confident than before and we knew from the lie detector that he was laboring under great excitement. "Come, Doctor," urged Thatcher Colt patiently. "We are all ashamed of something."

Revealed Emotions

"Are you ashamed of something in connection with the house on Pedler's Road?"

Again the extraordinary jiggle of emotions, traced by the electric pen on the moving tape, showed that the Commissioner had struck a sensitive vein in the doctor's emotional system.

"No," he repeated.

"Why did you keep that place on Pedler's Road?"

With every reference to the little portable cottage of blood and death the charts leaped at once into high peaks of emotional excitement and descended into valleys that might have recorded shame and despair.

"I like to have a place to hide away in."

"Alone?"

"Yes!"

Like stock brokers, Thatcher Colt and Dougherty were watching the tapes as they were fed into their hands by the silent young expert from Chicago. The District Attorney was exceedingly solemn and serious; he glanced at the Commissioner as if to indicate that he was beginning to have some respect for this apparatus.

"When were you last in the house on Pedler's Road?"

"About three weeks ago."

"Anyone with you then?"

"No."

"Had Geraldine Foster ever been there?"

"No."

"Are you certain?"

"I have no knowledge that she was ever there."

"But she was murdered there."

"I mean previously."

"Did you know she was going there this one time which resulted in her death?"

The chart lines during these last few questions were quite unimpressive. The emotional excitement in the doctor seemed to pass away when Geraldine Foster was brought into the question. No dizzy climbs of trace lines appeared when the murder was mentioned. It was on some subtle, obscure point that he trembled. But who could determine the meaning of this?

Justified Murder

"Do you believe that murder is ever justified?"

"Yes."

"How do you mean that?"

"I have philosophical ideas on the subject. I believe in euthanasia. But my notions have no bearing on this inquiry. I do not practice a philosophy opposed to the laws under which I live."

"But doesn't your philosophy hold that murder is justified, even if it is opposed to the laws under which you live?"

"Theoretically—yes."

"If sufficiently justifiable grounds arose, would you commit murder in spite of the laws?"

"I don't know."

"Think again."

"I say, I don't know."

"Why did you quarrel with your brother George?"

"Because he did not approve of my private life."

"Did his wife also disapprove?"

"She did not know anything about it. What happened took place before she married my brother."

"Does she dislike you now?"

"She does not know me. As I do not associate with my brother, I naturally do not know his wife. We have never met."

"Will you look at this?"

Thatcher Colt for the first time gave into Maskell's hands the note which George Maskell had written that morning. The physician was plainly astonished, no, delighted.

"That's the silver lining for all this," he remarked, with unsteady voice.

"There is nothing to indicate they don't know you," prodded Colt.

"No," said Maskell, smiling broadly. "No—that's what's so wonderful about it."

Certainly, if the lie detector machine was to be trusted, the doctor had been telling the truth during these last few questions. The lines ran in even, undulating curves like the waves of a peaceful sea.

"Your brother is a clever lawyer," resumed Colt, "but how do you intend to explain to him the lies you have been telling me?"

"Lies about your whereabouts on Christmas Eve. You know you have concealed the truth about that."

"I do not conceal the truth."

"You did not deliver those seven presents you told us about, while Checkies and the child were eating ice-cream. No one, doorman, footman, or elevator men, at the addresses you supplied, can remember your delivering those presents. Where were you?"

"I was where I said I was—delivering those presents!"

Until those last few exchanges, the chart had remained monotonous. But all passivity vanished when the doctor's whereabouts during the ice-cream episode was mentioned. There we had the high peaks again, an almost unmistakable accusation that Maskell was lying.

"You know that your insistence on this falsehood, which even this machine proclaims, subjects you to the gravest suspicions?"

"Unjustly so."

"Had you quarrelled with Geraldine?"

"No—except about her marriage."

"Why, Doctor—are you sure?"

"Perfectly."

"She hadn't tried to obtain money from you?"

"Blackmail? Why, of course not."

"No?"

Thatcher Colt pulled the paper ribbon over far enough for the doctor to see it.

"Look at that graph and admit that you lied, Doctor Maskell. I am afraid you are your own worst enemy in this investigation, Doctor."

"You're showing yourself guilty as hell!" roared Dougherty.

Doctor Maskell shrugged his shoulders and lit a cigarette.

"What are your next questions?" he demanded. "I tell you that Geraldine Foster was above trying to blackmail anybody."

I could see, then, that Thatcher Colt had been holding back all this time the evidence of the blackmail note, rescued from the waste-paper. He was not giving his hand away. Not knowing it had been found, the physician would be unable to prepare a defense against it, and when the evidence was exploded at the trial it might easily seal his doom.

"Why do you suppose Geraldine Foster told Betty Canfield she wished she was dead and that she might soon be dead?"

"I don't know."

"Haven't you any suspicions?"

"No."

"You told us you were surprised about the bottle of tannic acid delivered to your office."

"I was."

"But you didn't call up the chemist and ask him to explain?"

"I beg your pardon—I did."

"He doesn't remember it."

"I talked to his clerk—I think the young man is now away from the store with pneumonia."

This fact, Thatcher Colt subsequently checked and found correct. The clerk was delirious and could not be questioned.

"Pretty cool," he said. "Evidently you would like to make yourself appear the victim of a gigantic plot. Some mysterious enemy—perhaps the dead girl herself—planting evidence against you, framing you—bah! It won't go down, Doctor."

"Lies!"

All this time the graph was as calm as the waves of a summer sea. No sign of excitement in the doctor at all. Yet here it seemed to me, he was being questioned on the most vital part of the case.

Lake Champlain Section Historic, Enchanting

bears away from the lake to follow a winding course in crossing and recrossing the picturesque North West Bay Brook before it again touches the shore of Lake George at Sabbath Day Point. Through Uncas and the delightful Silver Bay section the highway reaches Ticonderoga. Here an interesting side trip leads to the ruins of the historic fort of that name.

From Fort Ticonderoga state route 36 leads along the shore of Lake Champlain to Keeseville where a short drive over U. S. Route 9 carries the tourists to Ausable Chasm. The chasm, located at a point where the Ausable River pours through to empty its waters into the lake, is accessible for its entire length of one and a half miles. The walls of the gorge, formed of colored sandstone, rise layer upon layer for more than 100 feet. Winding walks, sometimes near the water and at others high aloft, reveal charming views of successions of waterfalls, rapids and curiously formed rock formations. Spectacles of trees apparently growing from solid rocks and a profusion of ferns and wild flowers are found on every side. Below Table Rock the remainder of the journey through Ausable Chasm can be made in sturdy boats. On the homeward journey the travelers can follow the same highways as outlined in the outbound tour.

Trentonian, Ill at Work, Dies in Hospital Here

Stricken with a severe pain in his left side while at work for the F. H. Curtis Company, which firm is building the underpass at Green Lane P. R. R. bridge, C. William Watson, 1258 Princeton avenue, Trenton, N. J., died yesterday at the Harriman Hospital. Watson was taken ill at about 10.15 a. m., and was taken to the hospital by his co-workers. He died a short time later, death being attributed to angina pectoris.

Mrs. Martha Watson (nee Sanders), wife of the deceased, survives, as do also his father, Howard Watson; two brothers, Howard, and Thomas Watson; and two sisters, Mrs. Robert B. Stout and Mrs. Anna Watson, of California.

Mrs. Annie Ritchie Buried At Hatboro on Thursday

Mrs. Annie Ritchie, who resided at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Ritchie, of Bridgewater, passed away Tuesday morning. Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 2.30 from the Walton and Feltz Funeral Home in Hatboro. Interment was made at the Hatboro Cemetery.

The deceased was 89 years of age and was only ill about seven weeks, having suffered with a stroke. Mrs. Ritchie was a resident of Hatboro until five years ago, when she made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie. She was a member of the Baptist Church of Hatboro. Mrs. Ritchie is survived by two sons and one daughter: William, of Bridgewater; John, of Ambler; and Mrs. Reba Craven, of Hatboro. Five grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren also survive. Rev. Olgy, pastor of the Hatboro Baptist Church officiated at the funeral services.

As I wuz sayin' to Maggie...

just the other day, when we were on speakin' terms... I think, sez I, we're goin' to get a big surprise soon... and here it is! Me and me comedy gang in the Sunday Public Ledger are now all being drawn in FULL-SIZE PAGES in full color! Shure and what do you think o' that? They're BIGGER and BETTER than ever... and EASIER-TO-READ, too.

Just think, 12 BIG PAGES IN FULL COLOR... and there's myre laughs to the page than you'll find in any other newspaper, anywhere! Look us over on Sunday... and see if it isn't so!

For instance, there's Andy Gump, Hairbreadth Harry, Barney Google, Somebody's Stenog, Walt and Skeezix, Skippy, Harold Teen and many others with the same reputation fer bein' a swell crowd to have around when you're lookin' fer laughs!

If you don't enjoy yourself more than ever readin' and laughin' at these famous funmakers NOW, the treat'll be on me and I'll be takin' yez down to Dinty Moore's... the first time I can git away from Maggie!
